

Manuel Orozco

is currently a senior director of remittances and development at the Inter-American Dialogue, a Fellow for the Center for International Development at Harvard University, Senior Migration and Remittances Advisor for the International Fund for Agricultural Development and president of Migration and Development Group. He has theorized, conducted extensive research, policy analysis and advocacy on issues relating to global flows of remittances, and migration and development worldwide. His work has led to international policy and business initiatives leveraging these flows to build assets among families and migrants, and strengthen market competition. Dr. Orozco is also chair of Central America and the Caribbean at the U.S. Foreign Service Institute at the U.S. Department of State. He teaches at American University, and George Washington University. He is also a member of the Chairman's Committee on Economic Inclusion at the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. He has testified every year before Congress and has spoken before the United Nations. Orozco holds a Ph.D. in political science from the University of Texas at Austin, masters in public administration and Latin American studies, and a BA in international relations from the National University of Costa Rica.

Manuel Orozco has published widely on migration, remittances, Latin America, globalization, democracy, conflict in war torn societies, and minority politics. His publications include studies about the intersection between remittances and finances, financial literacy and development. He has analyzed and designed development strategies in more than 100 countries globally. His books include a forthcoming on Central America in November 2015. Migrant remittances and development in the global economy (Lynne Rienner Spring 2013), América Latina y el Caribe: migración, remesas y desarrollo (FLACSO, 2012), Remittances: Global Opportunities for International Person-to-Person Money Transfers (London: Lafferty Group, 2005) and International Norms and Mobilization for Democracy (London: Ashgate Publishers, 2002).
